THE SPIRITS BUSINESS

THE GLOBAL SPIRITS MASTERS INTRODUCTION

The Spirits Business is the only international trade publication dedicated to spirits, bringing you the latest news, insights and world-class events.

Since 2008, The Global Spirits Masters has been recognising excellence in spirits production to give brands much-needed differentiation in a crowded market. The blind-tasting series spans all categories, from the giants such as vodka and Scotch whisky, to niche and up-and-coming sectors like no-alcohol and pre-mixed products.

What sets us apart from other competitions on the market is that our esteemed judges have no brand affiliations, guaranteeing independent assessments by expert journalists, retail buyers, bartenders and educators.

The Global Spirits Masters is split into multiple categories to make sure each entrant is given due care and consideration. Judges can award Silver, Gold and Master medals, as well as additional trophies for outstanding excellence.

It is incredible to see the level of creativity, innovation and new product development that graces the competition year after year. And I look forward to chairing this year's competitions and rewarding the best products the spirits world has to offer.

The Global Spirits Masters - Promoting Your Success on Social Media

Social media is one of the most effective spaces to showcase your medal wins from The Global Spirits Masters series of blind-tasting competitions and grow brand awareness through exposure to consumers and the trade alike - tag @thespiritsmasters and @spiritsbusiness and we'll share your post! Here are some ideas for growing your social media channels:

Content Ideas

- Awards updates: Sharing any awards that you've won is a great way of boosting brand image, and certifies your brand as a leader in industry excellence. Not only will your consumer followers love to see how you stand out from the crowd, but sharing any accolades on social media will also put you on distributors', marketers' and other industry professionals' radars.
- Meet the team posts: People love to see people, and your followers are no exception! Getting to know members of your team will help grow your brand's story and also help your community get to know you on a more personal level. Personalised connections will help strengthen community relationships and help to grow your brand among both consumers and the trade.
- Pictures from events, both behind the scenes and professional shots: Shots from events and behind the scenes are a useful way of putting faces to a brand and help give followers a further insight into day-to-day goings on. This all helps to create a brand story and followers love to see faces. Images from events also help to express to other trade accounts that you are active within the industry and could generate leads for future events.
- Industry news: Industry news is always worth posting about, especially if your brand is being mentioned or celebrated. Keeping the conversation going around industry news helps to build buzz and has a direct positive impact on the industry as a whole. Remember to hashtag key trends and conversations and tag relevant figures.
- Cocktail recipes: Cocktail recipes are a great way to generate product focused content without over relying on bottle shots. Consider creating your own recipes, or reposting from cocktail accounts and brands that you have a good relationship with. Encourage follower interactivity by asking followers to share their creations with you. Sharing followers' content in stories is an easy way to increase engagement.
- Food pairings: Food pairings are another useful way of creating product-centric content, without over relying on bottle shots. Again, a great opportunity for follower engagement by asking followers to share their own favourite pairings etc. Food & spirit pairings can generate interesting content which contrasts with the more expected food & wine pairings.

User Generated Content (UGC)

- User generated content (UGC): Reposting from other accounts is useful when you have limited resources for content creation, it is also a great way to interact with your community. Ideally, you need to seek permission before reposting content by DM or commenting on the original post. Always give credit to the original account by tagging them and giving 'photo credit' in the caption. Encourage your followers to create UGC through competitions, reinterpretations and campaigns - making it clear that entries will be used on social media bypasses the complications with seeking permission afterwards.

Campaigns

The use of rolling campaigns helps to create consistency in content, as well as reaffirm a particular brand message through multiple iterations of this message across your channels. Not only do ongoing campaigns create brand tangibility and awareness amongst followers by association of the brand with a particular message, but are a great way of growing a brand image and story. Campaigns can be a great way of tying in user generated content as well.

Competitions and Giveaways

Competitions and giveaways are a useful way of extending your account's reach and boosting interaction levels by encouraging users to share or interact with the post as a means of entering the competition. They don't take too much organisation, and can double up as a great means of promotion for another activity that you are currently running. For example, if you have an event coming up, why not run a giveaway for a couple of tickets? You can also put some money behind these types of posts to give your exposure levels that extra boost!

Before running any competition or giveaway involving alcohol, it is important that you research any restrictions surrounding alcohol on social media, particularly in countries where it's advertisement and promotion are heavily restricted.

Tips & Tricks

- Find the best time of day for your interaction levels to post
- Keep content consistent in style and messages
- Be aware of how your page looks when planning which images to use (if applicable) - your homepage should visually reflect your brand
